ATTEND GUINNESS

Police guns will be carried in the overcast pockets of officers assigned to duty at the funeral Saturday of Carmello Guinnes, slain gang leader, on orders issued today by Capt. John J. Rooney of the 1st Hanover st. station.

The order follows a conference of the district attorney and the following reports that rivals of the Senate finance committee today at the hearings on bills providing cash redemption now.

He said the treasury had estimated a deficit of nearly $400,000,000 when, as a matter of fact, a surplus of $800,000,000 existed.

Patman spoke in behalf of full payment of the bonus. He said the gang once directed by Gufrre might open fire on the mourners during the march from the home of the slain leader to the cemetery in Forest Hills.

TROUBLE EXPECTED

Ordinarily police revolvers are carried in the officers' hip pockets. In issuing his order, Capt. Rooney stated that trouble was expected.

and advised his men to have their weapons in overcoat pockets where they would be immediately available.

In addition to the squads of uniformed men of Station 1, a large detail of plainclothes officers and plainclothes men of the detective force will be on duty.

for Hit-Run Story

Rome, Jan. 23 (AP)—Italian newspapers, hereafter attributed to General Smedley D. Butler of the United States Marine Corps in which he was killed, have made remarkable derogatory references to Premier Mussolini, today printing editorials characterizing the general's speech as impudent, insolent and ridiculous.

Washington, Jan. 20 (AP)—An apology to Premier Mussolini—delivered by the American government and a court martial for Major General Butler today came as a result of the now celebrated speech that the marine officer made recently.

Ruiter was ordered by his commandant, Maj. Gen. Fyler, to place himself under arrest and not to leave the barracks at Quantico, Va., which he commands.

WICKER HAS BOARD APPEALS BY PROHIBITION RECORDS

RECORDS

Nearly 70,000 Arrests, or 1 in Every 50 of Population, Are Revealed

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Correspondent.
Washington, Jan. 29.—The Wickersham commission was virtually unanimous in finding that prohibition is not being adequately enforced, that it never has been adequately enforced and that there is grave doubt whether it ever can be adequately enforced.

This finding, it was learned today, was based upon evidence of non-enforcement in all sections of the country, upon the testimony of hundreds of witnesses in all walks of life, and upon a study of federal activities since prohibition began.

NEARLY 70,000 ARRESTS
Since 1920 nearly 70,000 citizens have been arrested for prohibition violations by federal agents. Other arrests are not included.

Experts believe that the commission reported that in 1920, 1921 and 1922 Americans have been arrested at some time during the last 10 years for prohibition violations.

Even upon a record of 500,000 prohibition violations the commission was unanimously of the opinion there was no need to enforce prohibition, probably there cannot be.

The record prompted one member of the commission to remark that if there was adequate enforcement "everybody would be in jail."

The yearly arrests by federal agents show steady increase.

In 1920, the first year of enforcement, for example, there were 10,545 arrests. The next year they jumped to 34,775, the next to 42,225 and in 1923 to 48,825.

1924 was highest with 75,307. FINE $65,576.156.

Convictions range roughly about 10 per cent of the arrests. Up to this year there were 413,448 convictions with fines imposed upon $65,576.156.

Since 1923 35,165 were imprisoned, and 10,000 were fined.

The commission regarded this record as an appalling one in relation to the number of lawbreakers.

And considering that all except a few states have their own enforcement laws, and that state courts and judges are steadily grinding away at their grates of cases, it becomes even more appalling.

In the opinion of the members of the Department of Justice is to have no more to do with prohibition enforcement. With 500 additional enforcement agents, great and convictions this year and next are expected to greatly exceed that of any previous year.

DEATH OF MARINES Faces Court for Accusing Duce

American government had acted to ameliorate what was considered by the Italians as an affront to Italy.

TEXT OF NOTE
The American note was dated Jan. 29 and read as follows:

"Excellent! I have the honor to express the deep regret that this government feels at the reflections against the Prime Minister of Italy in the unauthorized speech of Maj. Gen. Smedley Butler, United States Marine Corps, at Philadelphia, on January 28, 1931."

"The sincere regrets of this government are extended to the Marine Corps for this discourteous and unwarranted statement by a commissioned officer of this government on active duty."

"Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurance of my highest consideration.—HARRY L. SIMMONS, His Excellency, Nobile Italian Ambassador."

In his speech, Gen. Butler is reported to have pictured Mussolini as a "hit-and-run driver" who ran down a child along an Italian roadside, and that he was "a one life in the affairs of state."

There were other reflections upon the policies of the Italian dictator in Butler's speech.

In his speech, Gen. Butler's remarks were promptly made at the State Department by the State Department, upon the orders from the Italian foreign office. The State Department asked the Navy Department to investigate the incident.

The Secretary of the Navy, Admiral Clegg, called upon Gen. Butler for an explanation.

Gen. Butler placed in Secretary Adams' hands today the letter in which he admitted making substantially the remarks at Philadelphia, and the order for the court-martialing.

RARE INCIDENT
State Department officials said they could not recall of any similar apologetic recently. On occasion the American government has apologized for the actions of its citizens, but no life has resulted from such a mistake as in China or Indonesia involving unwarranted violence of a foreign nation.

The incident formally happened in 1929 when the Washington police arrested a man for a diplomatic-immunity shipment of liquor to the Italian legation.

Ambassador de Martino immediately called the text of the American note to the foreign office at Rome.

Secretary Adams ordered General Fuller to name the high ranking officers of the Navy service who will constitute the court. While the number of men to try Butler was not specified, Fuller's selection was subject to the approval of Secretary Adams.

Near Admiral Rogers, judge advocate general of the Navy, will lead the court. The court, on hearing the evidence is closed, and the defendant found guilty on each charge.

A final judgment, reached which must be approved by the Secretary of the Navy, will be rendered. The place where the court will sit has not been decided.

ASSAILS VOLSTEAD
Another Butler speech that caused a stir in the United States, was made in Oakland, Calif., a year or two ago. He said that Volstead, of Philadelphia, was a "quack" as asserting that the "Volstead Act" was supposed only to "keep liquor away from persons without license."

Many of the general's friends and supporters of the dry laws by law and deed while in Philadelphia. He also had to leave Alexander Williams of the San Diego Marine Base court-martialed on charges of drunkenness.

He presented the charges after a dinner given in his honor at Col. Williams' home in Coronado. Williams was reprimanded and his rating lowered. Few months after wards he was dropped after his automobile plunged into San Francisco Bay.

Bill another address by Butler which caused a stir in unofficial circles was made in San Diego in 1928. The general had told of his experiences in Philadelphia and of instruction police to "shoot to kill" if necessary. The San Diego County Federated Trades and Labor Council wrote Curtis D. Wilbur, then navy secretary that the address was "scurrilous and inflammatory." The secretary did nothing, but it, however.

Charge Against Duce
Heard by Boston Man
Jan. 29 (AP)—Clarence H. White, manager of a firm, said today Premier Mussolini was accused of a hit-and-run driver by Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., before a court in New York.

White said other persons present at the hearing told the story in which Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. said that he had seen Mussolini in a car, and that he had seen Mussolini in a car, and that he had seen Mussolini in a car.

Commenting on the official statement given a speech of Gen. Butler, referring to the incident, White related he heard Vanderbilt's story at the Vanderbilt hotel.

The Boston man, mentioned in one of a group who heard Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., tell a story of Premier Mussolini, to Elbert A. Wickes of de Adella ave. Weston.

"It was at a gathering of lecture managers at the Vanderbilt Hotel in New York that Mr. Vanderbilt told me some of his latest experiences, but he asked me to maintain confidence on his subjects," Wickes told the Boston Evening Herald.

"I'm sorry that I cannot tell you the story of the incident, but I am sorry that I cannot tell you the story of the incident, but I am sorry that I cannot tell you the story of the incident."

Vermont Resents
Loss of Lawmaker
Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 29 (AP)—Porter has won favor today by federal null and void the minute the clerical act reporting Congress into effect under the provisions of a bill introduced in the House of Representatives.

Under the act of reappointment, the Vermont legislature would lose of its two congressmen.

The bill was proposed by Rep. Zena H. Ellis of Fair Haven and was referred to the committee on temperance. It provided that "all acts or parts of acts for the enforcement of the 18th Amendment shall be null and void when and where Vermont is deprived of its second representative in Congress."

There's no guesswork about Grandmother's Bread. The loaves are carefully weighed and blended, the salt, sugar and yeast carefully measured. Almost human machines knead the dough and place it in the pans. Then, slowly moving through spotless ovens of white tile, each loaf is perfectly baked to crispy brown goodness. No wonder New England uses 350,000 loaves of this better bread every day in the week!

By NANCY BREWSTER

At this time, the beginning of the year, Mrs. Carl L. Hill, Jr., state chairman of public health, urges every clubwoman in the Commonwealth to submit to a complete health examination.

"Health is the biggest business in the world. Health is an investment," her message to the more than 150,000 Bay State club women reads.

"It will going to be a year of health prosperity for you or one of health depression," she says. Let us take a detailed inventory and check up our assets and liabilities. Are we operating at a loss or at a profit?

"We wish to urge every clubwoman to start this new year with a complete health examination. For to believe that it is the very finest protection and preparation for health and happiness. Do not wait until your health is below par; be examined at the very height of health. You can make no better investment."

Mrs. Hill, public health chairman, is pursuing a new policy in popularizing the idea of health. Under her supervision health institutes are being sponsored throughout the state by affiliated clubs of the federation.

MARSHAL FOCH'S WAR MEMOIRS

'Stop the Enemy in His Tracks,' Foch Order in Belgium

DESPERATE STEPS TAKEN TO HALT FOE'S RUSH

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH

Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies During the Closing Phases of the World War

Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott

ANTWERP WAS OCCUPIED by the German Army on October 9 and the Belgian Army began its retreat in the direction of Eindhoven and Brussels. The British Admiralty had dispatched the Seventh Infantry and the Third Cavalry Divisions under Gen. Rawlinson, France a brigade of marines under Admiral Bonare's, toward Antwerp for the purpose of securing the Belgians, but these forces had been unable to proceed beyond Ghent and were now falling back covering the right of the Belgian Army.

That army first gained the region Ostend-Thourout-Dixmude-Furnes. Here Gen. Pau, attached to the Belgians as representative of the French Supreme Command, joined it on the 10th. He found the troops worn out by the siege of Antwerp and the subsequent retreat. Their retirement was continuing on Calais and Saint-Omer, when Gen. Joffre endeavored (but without success) to divert them toward Ypres and Poperinghe, so that they might join the Allied armies in the enveloping movement then in progress.

When I learned of the Belgians' intentions, I asked Gen. Pau to prevail upon them to fix Dunkirk as their base of operations rather than Calais, as this would place them nearer to Belgium at the very moment when the Allied armies were about to advance into that country.

Plans On Rally

Foch Seeks to Save Belgian Army

It was decided, therefore, on the 11th, at Ostend, that all the depots and untrained men would be sent to Dunkirk, and that the six divisions constituting the Belgian Army would be assembled in the region Nieuport-Furnes-Dixmude. They would still be covered on the east by Gen. Rawlinson's British divisions and Admiral Bonare's brigade of French marines.

The Belgians were not to retire unless attacked; in the event of being obliged to retreat, they were to take up a final defensive position behind the Yser and the canal from Dixmude to Ypres, keeping touch always with that last named town.

This retention of the Belgian Army along the coast isolated it to such a degree as might very well prove fatal to it. Moreover, the important center of communications presented by the town of Ypres would have to be abandoned, and this might deal a mortal blow to the entire Allied plan.

Accordingly, on the 12th, I instructed Gen. Bidon, the military governor of Dunkirk, "to take under his orders the Eighty-seventh and Eighty-ninth Territorial Divisions; then, having established himself in position on the Poperinghe-Ypres road, he was to endeavor to make contact in the direction of Zandvoort and Roulers with the Allied forces to the east (Belgian, British and the French marines)."

"He was to do so maneuver as to keep in touch with the British forces arriving that day on his right at Leckie; in addition he was to organize a strong defensive position at Ypres, so as to check any hostile advance from the direction of Armentieres, Comines or Menin."

Out of these heterogeneous, changing and unstable allied elements, it was hoped and intended to create, at once, starting on October 14, a safe place of meeting and a center of resistance upon which the Allies could base their future action.

The state of the Belgian Army also had to be taken into account. During two months it had been subjected to a succession of the hardest blows (Liege, Namur and Antwerp), not to mention prolonged bombardments. For such trials this army was less prepared than any of the others.

Up to 1914 it had known nothing but peace. The neutrality of Belgium, guaranteed by the Great Powers of Europe, had become an article of faith which not only removed all menace of serious war from her army, but brought about a limitation of its functions.

From the point of view of home affairs, the army was merely the guardian of public order; from the point of view of foreign affairs, its duty consisted in guarding the country from invasion until such time as the guaranteeing powers could come to her defense and take under the protection of their armies the maintenance of her independence. But the lofty sense of honor which animated the king and the nation caused the Belgians to throw themselves into a tremendous struggle which a formidable neighbor had carefully prepared.

It was this reality, so different from anything it had ever had reason to expect, that the Belgian Army now had to face. And the nervous force of its soldiers was all that remained to replace the deficiencies of their armament.

On Nerve Alone

Belgian Army Is Far From Well Equipped

The uncertainty I felt regarding the situation on the North Sea coast and the amount of resistance we could offer there to the progress of the invasion decided me on the 16th to make a rapid visit to that region with which as yet I was unacquainted.

Accompanied by Maj. Desticker and Lieut. Tardieu, I proceeded on the morning of the 16th first of all to Saint-Omer, whither Marshal Foch's headquarters had been moved. I asked him to insure the cooperation of the British Navy against the German right in the direction of Ostend; also to divert the enemy attacks from the Belgian Army by advancing Gen. Rawlinson's corps from Ypres in the direction of Roulers.

I then went to Dunkirk. A large stock of supplies had been collected there which it was essential to protect from a sudden raid, so I ordered up a brigade of Territorials and, in conjunction with Gen. Plantey, the new military governor, I assured myself that the defenses were making good progress and that everything was in readiness for effecting the inundations.

The fresh-water sues had already been opened and the water was now spreading; the salt-water inundations could be started whenever desired, as the canals had been filled

Heroic Men of Flanders at the Defense of Antwerp

TO THE LAST MAN. Gallant Belgian defenders are shown here in the trenches on the outskirts of Antwerp in the unsuccessful defense against the German army as it swept across Belgium in October, 1914. These men held off the German onslaught for more than a week before city finally was abandoned. The halt enabled the French to consolidate their forces.

At Dunkirk I met Monsieur de Broqueville, the Belgian prime minister. After discussing with him the local military situation and the general political outlook, we decided to go together to the Belgian Army headquarters at Furnes in order to see the king.

Stop Retreat!

The Vital Task Now Confronts Commander

For it was now necessary to take a decision of paramount importance, namely, to prevent the Belgian Army from entirely abandoning Belgium. Its retreat must be stopped and it must hold on to a portion of its native soil, however small the strip might be. Monsieur de Broqueville was an able, far-seeing statesman, full of decision. He agreed with these views and undertook to support them.

Once more, on the road from Dunkirk to Furnes, we had to pass through a pitiful throng of inhabitants fleeing before the invasion. A dense mass, composed of women, children and young girls, of nuns, priests and old men, filed the roads, pressing onward in the confusion of a hurried flight, worn out by the fatigues of a ceaseless march and of nights passed in the open fields under a cold October rain.

Furnes was crowded with Belgian troops, exhausted by the terrible bombardment of Antwerp and eight days of retreat. The king, commander-in-chief of the Belgian Army, had established his headquarters in the town hall, a building of period architecture, situated in one corner of an artistic square, now the scene of a busy movement that contrasted strangely with its habitual solitude.

Accompanied by Lieut-Col. Brocard, the head of our mission with the Belgian Army, and preceded by M. de Broqueville, I made my way to headquarters. Here I found Gen. Hanvieux, the Belgian chief of staff, and Gen. Wielemans, the deputy chief. They were still suffering from the disturbing effects of the long and painful retreat.

I explained to them the reasons which justified the hal-ling of this retreat and the means which could be employed to oppose the enemy. The German units on the Belgian front consisted of second-call troops, army corps composed of reservists. The infantry undoubtedly was not as good as that which had just been stopped and driven back in France, but there could be no doubt that it would be accompanied by a large force of artillery.

By digging in, the Belgian Army could parry the enemy's blows and provide a barrier which French troops would soon reinforce. Dixmude was already held by a brigade of French marines, first-class troops. This gave us a strong point on which to anchor the defense of the line.

A few moments later the king received me. He was in the Salle des Echevins, a large, finely decorated room, with a huge fireplace, whose hooded-up logs gave out a warmth most welcome on that cold, penetrating day. This was the first time I had met this illustrious personage, the very embodiment of honor and duty. I found a certain amount of embarrassment in approaching him, determined as I was to defend with all my might the common cause in which were bound up the safety of Belgium and the fate of the Allied battle then in progress. His response to my sentiments was not long in coming.

Belgium was now but a shred of territory to which its government and its army were clinging. If they retreated another 12 miles their country would be lost completely. The enemy would have it entirely in his power to dispose of as he wished; the country might even disappear from the map of Europe. For was it rare that it could be given a new birth in the treaty of peace?

Faith In Army

King Believes His Men Will Rally

The king recognized that the Belgian Army was much exhausted, but he believed that, at the call of their commander-in-chief, the troops would find new energy with which to defend what remained of their native soil. They could be counted upon to stand on to the Yser and thus give time to the Allied forces to come to their aid.

Ample proof of the soundness of this reasoning was soon to come. Fresh decisions were taken, new dispositions made, and the re-organized Belgian Army proceeded to defend the Yser from Nieuport to Dixmude and Boesinghe; it was there that the French troops found them when they came up in support.

On the day following this interview the king visited all his divisions. He reminded them that the Belgian Army was now disputing the last parcel of their country's land and that they must die rather than give way. He informed the division commanders that if any one of them retreated without a formal order, he would be relieved of his command on the spot.

Thanks to these dispositions, it now seemed possible to check the invasion which was moving down the coast. To this end we would defend the Yser from the North Sea to the English Channel, and the position of Dixmude with the brigade of marines; and farther south, on the Yperle and up to Ypres, we could use the French territorial troops which were already there and which I was rapidly reinforcing with divisions of cavalry. This would enable us to await the arrival of the French reinforcements which the commander-in-chief had promised.

In pursuance of these ideas, before leaving Furnes on the evening of the 16th, I dispatched a hurried message to Admiral Bonare's denying his role at Dixmude.

"Under the present circumstances any idea of maneuvering is out of the question and your tactics must be confined purely and simply to resisting on your actual positions."

With this end in view every possible means should be used for providing shelter and defenses for all your troops.

King Resolute

The Hesitation of His Subordinates Marked

"As to the line of conduct to be pursued, your mission is to stop the enemy in his tracks and above all by fire action. In view of the strength of your forces, the means at your disposal, which enable you to occupy a wide extent of front, you should find no difficulty in holding your ground."

"Nothing short of a formal order from your superiors or the capture of the whole of your position by the enemy will justify you in evacuating your position."

"Needless to say, that I count upon you absolutely to fulfill this mission."

Let me add here that the admiral and his sailors performed their task in a most glorious manner. Finally, in order to provide for every contingency, I caused the defenses of Dunkirk to be supplemented by inundations which stretched for seven or eight miles in front of the town, thus forming an obstacle along the coast behind which fresh resistance could be organized, should the Belgian line be broken.

Such was the defensive system we were able to rapidly throw together for the purpose of stopping the enemy's march "nach Calais" and frustrate his new plan, which no longer aimed at Paris but at the Channel ports. This outcome was due to the king's quick understanding and his determination, as he himself affirmed on the 16th of October, to consecrate his entire army to the task.

The hesitations of some of his subordinates were in marked contrast to this resolute attitude of the king, for at the very moment when our decisions were being made at Furnes, Monsieur Augagneur, then Secretary of the Navy, while en route back to Belgian Headquarters which he had left the evening before, stopped at Doullens and asked my chief of staff, Col. Weygand, to have cantonments prepared in the neighborhood of Calais, where the Belgian Army might be housed and reformed. For, according to its general staff, there was nothing it could do but retire from the struggle.

Help Is Urged

Foch Urges More Troops On Left of British

I returned in the evening to my headquarters at Doullens, 73 miles from Furnes. Here I wrote a report of the day's doings to the commander-in-chief:

"I have just come from Furnes, general headquarters of the Belgian Army. On my way there this morning, I stopped at Saint-Omer, headquarters of Marshal Foch, and I have asked him:

(1) to urge his government to order a naval squadron to operate off the coast at Ostend against the German right.

(2) to advance Rawlinson's corps from Ypres in the direction of Roulers, in order to divert the German attack from the Belgian Army.

"I then proceeded to Dunkirk and saw the governor. He informed me, and I believe it, that the place is in a good state of defense. The fresh-water inundations have been effected and the salt-water ones are ready."

"Belgian refugees of every description are now being taken care of without difficulty. The same conditions obtain at Calais."

"I then went to Furnes. The Belgian Army is established along the line of the Yser. It has been ordered to reorganize there and to defend itself with the utmost energy. The King and the Prime Minister seem determined to adopt these tactics and to see that they are carried out."

"The British Army is continuing its advance on Courtrai. Today it has again made some progress."

"P. S.—All the same, whenever you have some really reliable troops available to send to the left of the Belgian Army, it would be well from every point of view to do so."

In the Morning!

Just take a pleasant-tasting candy Cascaret tonight and see how you feel next morning. You wake with coating gone from your tongue, breath is sweet, eyes brighter; you feel like a different person. The most pleasant way to rid of constipation is with candy Cascarets. They are made from cascara—a never-failing laxative—as any doctor will tell you—and a laxative that actually helps strengthen the bowel muscles. So the prompt, harmless relief Cascarets always bring is lasting. Their gentle thorough action makes them ideal for elderly people. Children love their delicious candy flavor.

to Hear Chicago Stars in Wagner's Work

THE JUVENILE COTERIE of the social world played "hooky" from school and college yesterday afternoon to attend the third offering of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, "Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg" by Wagner. Smart day time costumes were the feature of the fashionable world and many chic fur-trimmed costumes were noted. MRS. ROBERT SALTON-STALL arrived with her young daughter Marjorie, who has allowed her blonde locks to grow; Mrs. Daniel DeMott was escorted by Miss "Betsy," the young daughter of the house; Mrs. Schier Shaw brought her two youngfairs, Bramwell, Jr. and Eleanor; and Mrs. Conover Fitch had young Conover, Jr., beside her. Miss Jane Bancroft was in her father's box with Polly Richardson, and Mrs. H. Wendall Elliott was with the young daughter of Mr. Elliott, Miss Martha Barren Endicott.

THE YOUTHFUL DAUGHTER of the John S. Ames of Commonwealth ave., Miss Rebecca, was present, and we saw Virginia Bampton, Bertha Bartlett and Betty Pope with friends. Miss Halla, who is a debutante of this season, and Miss Ellen and Miss Grace Cushing and Barbara Welch enjoyed the matinee. Among the other group, Miss Edith Parker, commandante of the Vincent Club, accompanied David Cheever, Mrs. Philip Saltwater, Mrs. Joseph Bradbury, Jr., Mrs. George Danby and Miss Isabelle Grandin.

ELEANOR JONES WAS with her mother, Mrs. Arthur Jones, and also Mr. and Mrs. Roger Wolcott, Mrs. Eira Thayer and Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw and Mr. Clement E. Lamson with his sister, Miss Gertrude Lamson. Every seat in the house was taken for this matinee and the enthusiasm for opera seems unabated, with many gems yet to be heard. Last evening "La Bohème," Puccini's masterpiece, played to a packed house.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN GARDNER COOLIDGE of Commonwealth ave. attended "La Bohème" last evening bringing a large party of dinner guests with them, among them Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Storey, Jr., Miss Catherine Lane, Mr. Henry Shattuck and Mr. Prescott Wolcott.

New York Fishermen Protest Ship Seizure
New York, Jan. 29.—Fishermen have protested the mysterious seizure of the fishing smack Good Luck for the second time by the Coast Guard.
"When some Coast Guard agents got over their high-handed methods we'll tie up our boats and cut off New York's supply of fresh fish," declared a market man.
Agents boarded the Good Luck and kept her crew prisoners for 24 hours while they bored holes, tipped up plank and rained the fish. It is charged.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE HEAD WARNS PUBLIC TO AVOID TIPS

STUDY VALUE IS MESSAGE BY WHITNEY

Bear Raid Probe Failed to Bare Plot, Says Whitney in Talk Here

The economic and industrial structure of the United States is sound, but buyers of securities should study value and not rely on tips, rumors and hopes, President Richard Whitney of the New York Stock Exchange declared today in a luncheon address at the Chamber of Commerce.

For the first time he discussed the stock exchange probe of so-called "bear raids" and announced that no nefarious plots had been uncovered and not a single person found who deliberately launched pessimistic rumors to depress securities.

"Raid" to the same economic causes which induced the general liquidation of the past year, and defended short-selling as an even bid in an open security market.

TOO MUCH OPTIMISM
Bull and bear markets cannot be made to order, he asserted, but are the product of the mass psychology of millions of persons whose "composite eye" appraises every move.

"The vast mass of the people who hold securities became the pessimistic when we were in a period of prosperity and made mistakes when business conditions changed," he said.

"Nothing could be more dangerous for the future of the United States than to have constant and frequent cycles of inflation and deflation of securities prices. Cautionary people studying this situation may think this an argument against wide distribution of securities. I do not think so."

"I believe it is an argument that we should in every possible way endeavor to give real information to our investors so that their judgment can be based on facts. I have confidence in the intelligence of the American people."

LESSON HAS BEEN TAUGHT
"I feel 1929 has taught the danger of over-valuation of the immediate future and the depression of 1930 will teach them the danger of undue pessimism."

The primary lesson of the last two years is that the United States is and will continue to be a great industrial country; that industrial growth must necessarily be slow and if security prices discount this growth too far in advance, there is bound to be a readjustment.

On the other hand it is clear our leading corporations are soundly managed and have been built to endure through hard times as well as good. The economic situation of the great mass of investors is well under way and in future our security prices will reflect principally the normal cycles of business and the changing conditions which are inevitable attributes of progress."

GOES TO BED IN STRANGE HOME

"Broke" and homeless, Robert G. Brown, formerly a Boston stock broker, walked into a strange house upon finding the door unlocked, and went to bed in the absence of the occupants.

Today in Newton district court he was sentenced to the State farm for vagrancy by Judge Bacon, who filed a trespassing charge.

Arriving home about midnight, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mortimer of 17 Austin st., Newtonville, found a man's clothing in the living room and discovered Brown fast asleep in bed. They called the police.

Brown formerly lived on Macon ave., Newtonville. His wife is at the sanitarium at Rutland.

WILAND LASHES AT LAMPOON

Former Representative Thomas A. Wiland of East Boston wants the perpetrator of the "secular women" cartoon in the Harvard Lampoon prosecuted and punished for his going to ask the district attorney of Middlesex County to file a charge.

Wiland's statement was made today when he appeared before the legislative committee on taxation on his petition requesting that Harvard University be deprived of further taxation exemption.

"Those responsible for the outrageous cartoon which appeared in the Harvard Lampoon have committed a slander on the decent hard working women formerly connected with that institution," Wiland told the committee.

Speaking of his bill which would take away from the university the benefits of tax-free properties, Wiland said it was a retaliatory measure against Harvard's administration for its action in underpaying by two cents an hour the service women there for over a period of nine years.

"They discharged 18 of these women rather than pay them the two cents additional," he said. "When the state was young it was the laudable desire of the forefathers to further education."

Harvard was poor at that time. Now it is the richest university in the Western Hemisphere and it can well afford to pay its share of the burden of taxation.

Here's the Way to Treat Those Miserable Colds So Prevalent Here Now

WITH scattered cases of flu breaking out in this locality, don't take chances with colds NOW—it's too dangerous! Unless checked quickly, colds tend to pull down the body resistance and may pave the way for an attack of flu with all its serious complications.

- 1 At the first sign of stuffiness or irritation in the nose or throat, sniff some Vicks VapoRub up the nose several times a day. This will often check a cold at the start.
- 2 If the head is all "stuffed up"—clogged with mucus or phlegm—or there is much coughing, melt a teaspoonful of Vicks in a bowl or kettle of hot water and inhale the steaming vapors for five minutes at a time. This treatment has a remarkable effect in clearing the air passages, easing the breathing, soothing the irritation, relieving the cough, and helps to prevent the cold from spreading.
- 3 At bedtime, in order to get the benefit of its long-continued stimulation and inhalation effect, rub Vicks vigorously over the throat and chest and cover with warm flannel.
- 4 If possible, stay at home until the cold is broken. Complete rest helps the body to throw off the cold more quickly.

Mother!—treat children's colds promptly, but avoid "dosing." Too much internal medicine often upsets a child's digestion and lowers the vitality. Being applied externally, Vicks does not upset the stomach, and can be used freely and as often as needed without the slightest harmful effect.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES WITH COLDS NOW!

REAL LOW DOWN ON CONDITIONS DOWN IN MIAMI

JIM MALONEY is heading down to Miami for the Camera fight and soon will be followed by many New England sports followers. In a few days, Florida and Miami, in particular, will be the winter sports center. With Sharkey, Schmelzing, Sharkey, Camera, Maloney and all the leading heavyweights lolling on the sands of Biscayne Bay and most of the ball clubs playing their training workouts within a radius of a few hundred miles the spot light will center on Florida in a big way.

How are things down there in the shade of the sheltering palms? Is business as brisk as usual? Will the Maloney-Camera fight pass to Miami as well as to New York? What price for the fight? How are the hotel business? How are the little red suit sales as merrily as of yore?

Knowing the winter in such times, we asked a few of the old and down there to send along some real information. Here on the air now. Time in every body.

"Since November the weather has been absolutely mild, sunny and chilly. Plenty of people are here but not as many as in the past. Apartment houses are getting folks who used to stay in the hotels.

Gambling is wide open in Miami, but the Beach is closed. The new track is doing fairly well, but the big betting is not playing the mutants. They don't like the Miami system. In straight betting you place a bet with the house and the odds change. With the mutants he places a bet at certain odds, which, by the time, have completely changed. Because of not having to get the big bets, many of the bookies have left Miami.

MALONEY FIGHT CAN NOT BE

"THERE'S FIGHT clubs have opened up an ankle wound that when they put on a real out. The fans will not turn out for the fight, says a source. The Maloney-Camera fight will go over. It can't be moved. It isn't the best health.

"Philadelphia and New York are here in down. You can't go into a hotel lobby without seeing half a dozen 'cut' men.

"Here, good here, it is a little. Much class liquor for $30 and $45 per case. Many of the real estate operators are running liquor.

"Change in the weather will bring better conditions. Most of the hotels are booked here for next month. Almost every hotel while will be down here.

"Hoped over to Havana last week. Things are not there. The political situation kept them away. But there were more Americans in Havana and they are more money.

"Maybe the weather had something to do with it. The two days I was in it were filled with older soldiers. Miami is sure to get it soon."

SHARKEE TENNIS STARS

New York, Jan. 29 (US)—Frank Hunter's advice to young tennis stars is not to let the game run away with them.

"It can be overdone," he says, "but it can also be taken with a grain of common sense. I made $100,000 in the three years I was No. 3 in the national rankings, beginning in 1927."

Hunter dropped his stock form on a chair in Bill Tilden's study at the Algonquin Hotel and passed for a moment in a hazy haze.

"I felt quite sure for you when I felt your statement in the newspapers to the effect you were willing to meet me in the ring any time. I realize that you were merely making a very weak attempt to convince the sporting world and public that you are not afraid to fight any heavyweights."

"I know now that you will never enter a ring with me unless it is to get introduced to the crowd where ultimately else is doing the fighting.

"I can picture William Muldow, veteran number of the ring, telling me that I knocked you out with a punch to the stomach and de la harte, that you would come back to challenge the championship under such conditions.

"I can also remember Joe Jacobs, your manager, telling the commission you would meet me in a return contest in September to complete what the commission termed an unfinished bout.

TIGERS AND INDIANS

Their position in third place menaced by a revived Philadelphia six which now shares that play-off berth with them, and with the New Haven Eagles and the Canadian-American League cellar only a game below them, the Boston Tigers tonight will tackle the league-leading Springfield Indians at the Boston Garden.

By BILL CONNELL
Paul Kanaly, Belmont boy, will run in the Leo Lariviere two mile grand, feature distance race of the William C. Prout Memorial track games on Saturday night at the Boston Garden.

The addition of Kanaly to the race strengthens the field greatly. Leo Lariviere, Gus Moore and Joe McKeen are probable favorites already announced for the contest and Kanaly is rated with the pair, the winner must run a fast race to enter in the laurels.

Another one of the top races of the Prout games, the 45-yard high hurdles, will have Monte Wells skipping over the sticks. Wells is a veteran of many seasons, but he seems to improve as the years roll along.

Wells always has been especially quick at the 45-yard hurdle. He is one of the world's record holders having several times bounded through the event in 3 1/2 seconds. Wells will be the favorite in the race, even though he has been beaten by Gene Reed and Johnny Hayes of Harvard. Art McDonald of Holy Cross, Don Telt of the Montreal and Frank Powers of Northeastern.
